From the very start of the project, Pres. Whitfield pointed out last night, the task has not been one of inducing persons to become members, but rather of establishing contacts with persons already eager to join and merely awaiting a word of invitation.

It is said to be the opinion not only of Mr. Mapes, but of the majority of the House who voted for the elimination of the half-and-half plan from the District's scheme of taxation, that the entire expense for the District should be taken from the taxes collected by the local auborities until the total is exhausted, and if there should then be a deficit it should be drawn from the United States Treasury.
